WHO: The CFAES Ambassadors are a team of students who represent the College of Food, Agricultural, and Environmental Sciences for recruitment and student representative purposes.

WHAT: Ambassadors volunteer their time and are trained to provide tours of the CFAES campus. They also enhance recruitment initiatives with the “student touch” and represent the CFAES student body at college and university events.

WHEN: Meetings are every other Wednesday at 7 a.m., with other events taking place throughout the semester. Events and duties are divided amongst all members based on their availability beyond class schedules, work, and club responsibilities.

WHY: It’s FUN! Ambassadors get to know one another and the faculty and staff as well, forming friendships that last a lifetime.
